The opinions expressed in this column are the personal views of the writer and do not necessarily reflect those of the management; in fact, many times they do not.—Editor.

There was a loud noise, in the nature of an explosion, heard in this vicinity last evening, which caused some people to think it was Colonel M. M. Garrett of Lafayett fulminating upon receipt of demand from the county auditor to pay back the money he had received for attendance upon grand jury meetings and for services in connection with grand jury committees.

The colonel occupies the unique distinction of being the only member of the William E. Lewis grand jury who received a check in full lafore someone whispered in the auditor's ear that the claims might be itlegal. The holding up of the remainder of them placed the auditor in a rather embarrassing posi-tion. He had acknowledged the legality of one by drawing a war-lant for it, but with a changed viewpoint, he placed himself in the position of having illegally authorized the payment of money out of the county treasury. Naturally he could not be right in both instances, so he was bound by his last conclusion. That made it manifestances, for the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the means of the county for him to got the county for hi datory for him to get the money to a world war."

IT WAS a strange afternoon that followed. Once, when Linda was trying to get up her courage to whisper a message to Jerry, she saw Flane, with his eyes on her, take the tiny vial from his pocket and play with it idly. She paled suddenly, and Jerry noticed. "Linda! What's the matter?"

Her eyes flashed a brave smile. "She taken a brave smile."

She saw that Euddy, standing by a showcase against the wall next of Marshall's office, had stiffen d. Then she realized that the tapping was coming from the other side of that wall. But Flane was apparently too busy talking to have noticed it.

The tapping continued. It was the Morse code! Managing to keep her face expressionless. Linda moved toward Flane and Jerry. She saw that Buddy, standing by a showcase against the wall next to Marshall's office, had stiffen d. Then she realized that the tapping was coming from the other side of that wall. The Ry TALBOT LAKE

A LARCE pefrentage of young active be film actresses, and Helen Vinson, of Beaumont. Texas, was no exception. Miss Vinson now holds a rominent place in the film colomy, and, besides, is engaged to free Perry, acknowledged to be the world's champion tennis player.

All this glamor was but a dream to Helen Rulfs (her real name) a few years ago, the same as with thousands of other grils. How she gained her present prominence is a remarkable story—remarkable story—r The Texas girl had nothing but the desire to act when she first went to New York. No friends, no pull, no money to depend upon What does a girl do in such a situation? Miss Vinson, using her exceedingly sensible head, looked in the Red Book, New York's business directory. She turned to the heading "Actors' Agents," and one of the first names she came to was

Wants a Change

T HAS always been one of the dark mysteries of life why women feel they must jump through hoops to please a man who wouldn't put himself out to oblige them. Maybe the reason is purely economic. When a women is dependent on a man she feels she must do as she is told. That's the husband attitude.

It's all a matter of temperament whether a man will dance to

"It is true." Allce spoke with assurance. "I can prove it, too. My little brother is sick. My mother has to stay home and give him medicine. He has three different kinds, How would she be able to do this if our clock wasn't going right?"

Now loud laughter greeted Alice's ears. And it was not from the children's table either. It was the grown-ups this time. She knew that they were laughing at the because they called to her teasingly.

Among the most dreaded experiences of childhood is the fear of being laughed at. Sometimes we cannot help enjoying a joke at a child's expense. But at such times it helps when we have the presence of emind of communicating to him by a smile or twinkle that the wy joke was only in what he said. It will restore his self-confidence.
